There is no judging a woman's mind. Sometimes it runs in well defined grooves and again at other times it erratically skips and glides about like a bob sled down hill without control. Some say a woman's acts are intuitive—as the mind is bent, so the acts are inclined. One of the star teachers in Marion Graded School sometimes orders her mid day lunch from one of the restaurants up town as the walk to her home is too long. A few days ago she wrote a note to Mr. W. H. Copher ordering what she wanted and utterly oblivious of the fitness of things she signed it Mrs. Copher. The state of health of Mrs. Copher number one is good, so argument in that direction could not be sustained. It is more properly attributed to the sub-conscious state of an active mind in which undreamed of thoughts find expression in meaningless repetitions. We might note before passing that this particular star teacher is a particular eligible matrimonial prospect. There are very few of the lady teachers in that school that could not support one man.

A special from Jefferson City, Mo., says that the representative from Morgan county, Missouri has introduced a bill into the legislature "to prohibit any woman from purchasing more than two hats during any one calendar year; to regulate the price to be paid for such hats and to prevent the wearing of any plumage thereon." The bill further provides that the hats shall not cost over $1.00 each. This will certainly be of interest to Missouri milliners and hat wearers of the feminine gender. Its passage and enforcement would relieve the pater who carries the pocket book of an immense load. This representative from Morgan county, Missouri is a peach with the fur rubbed off. His ability to break into the legislature of the various states as well as the Congress of the United States causes some thoughtful men to wonder whether or not our system of government is not faulty.

BITS OF BYPLAY.

The declaration of the horse trader, "what will you do and stand?" is familiar to all. Every circuit court and county court quite an army of horse traders gather in Marion and on the principle of "big fish—little fish—no fish at all" they trade and swap and each one goes home confident he has worsted the other fellow. This calls to mind a famous horse trade at Tolu, once upon a time. Dr. J. W. Jordan was a dentist in Marion, Princeton and other parts way back in the nineties. Attached to his accomplishment of pulling teeth, he was a horse trader and pulled legs. The groans of his tooth victims were no louder than the groans of his horse trading victims. His dextrous manner of pulling a leg out of socket on a horse trade was as absolutely certain as was his skillful way of pulling teeth. Nature had supplied the doctor with a bountiful suite of whiskers, in fact, his prominent feature was whiskers. They were long, black and fine. A good many years ago Dr. Jordan rolled into Tolu. He drove one horse in shafts to a buggy and lead half a dozen, two of which trotted besides the horse in the harness. Not long after his arrival he struck Mr. C. E. Weldon to sell him one of his horses. After hours of sparring and dickering the future county clerk bought his horse giving therefor one shot gun, one dollar and a half in money, a sack of Swans Down flour, a package of Arbuckle coffee and a gallon of green beans.

The roof on the old clerk's office situated in the court house yard was placed there in 1844. It is sixty-three years of age and the west side of the roof has never been painted. A good many years ago a painter came along who wanted to advertise his roof paint and he was allowed to paint the east side of this roof. It did not injure the roof any. This roof is the best roof in town today. The tinner who put it on was certainly an honest man and the county was in favor of buying good material at that time.

Obe Young pulled on a stool in Copher's restaurant. From way up under the edge of the pie counter he dragged it forth, and when the spring would not allow it to come further, he took a seat. Resting both elbows on the counter he placed his chin in both hands and remarked to a RECORDED rounder: "This restaurant is on the European plan. You call for what you want and don't pay for what you get."

The lack of winter in December is fully made up in February, we think so.

The Metcalf Ice Plant & Cold Storage Company and the cold storage and ice plant of the Marion Electric Light & Ice Company are now out of business. They have fallen into a state bordering on the "innocuous desuetude."

In a recent issue of this sheet various titles, degrees and appellations were ascribed to one of our best known physicians, Dr. T. A. Fraser. He belongs to all kinds of orders and his manifold duties are numerous enough to weigh down a stronger man than he. We desire to point out however that he has never yet been accused of being a lawyer or having any legal knowledge whatever. In fact, to hear him tell of something in court or employ some legal phrase forever settles in the mind of the listener his child like simplicity with all things pertaining to legal lore or court procedure. Last Monday, after the examining trial of John D. Gregory was over, he innocently inquired who were the jurors. Even the small school boys know that there are no juries in examining trials. The case is settled by the judge presiding always.

Phillip Deboe. We all know Phil Deboe. He is all right and a yard wide. His chest measurement gradually swelled through the month of January until he busted every vest he had. This was caused by the recent arrival of Deboe's heirs. On Jan. 11 Phil's daughter, the wife of Ed Perry, gave birth to a child. Jan. 18 another the wife of John Sheeks, presented her husband with a daughter and Jan. 25 Jim Allen's wife, another daughter, gave birth to a child. Phillip Deboe has worn a broad grin for a solid month.

Speaking of Phil Deboe we are reminded that he is the Kentucky gentleman who announced that he renounced Crittenden county and the state of Kentucky forever and would henceforth make his abode in Ar-kan-saw. So he moved to Ar-kan-saw. It was not long until letters began to come back saying that Mr. Deboe was telling the native Ar-kan-saw-ians how it was done in old Crittenden. Shortly after this the news filtered through that Mr. Deboe had become overheated in Ar-kan-saw. Then word came that Mr. Deboe would come to Kentucky and stay only two days. Intimated of course that he had business to attend to, but would have to get right back to Ar-kan-saw and business. Then the news was flashed over the wires that Phil and his family would come to Kentucky on a visit. They came. Uncle Phil stayed the two days. He attended to all the business he had to attend to. He stayed two weeks—two months—and now we hear he has sold his farm in Ar-kan-saw. In the last three weeks Mr. Deboe has sold his farm, become the grand father of three fine babies, got an increase in his pension and settled permanently in Kentucky.

John Nunn, of the firm of Nunn & Tucker furniture dealers and coffin putters away, has a grievance. His grievance is a coal grievance. John says, "If a man has a pocket full of money he can't buy enough coal to last him over night." Changing his tobacco from the left to the right side while a fine stream of amber issued from between his teeth, John continued, "Why do you know, I bought a load of coal and had it hauled from the mines. The man used a three and one-fourth inch wagon and had side boards on and it was only twenty-five bushels. Now down here these coal men never use side boards and their loads run anywhere from thirty-eight to forty bushels per load. I just tell you what, it is something fierce. I bought a load of nut coal and a load of lump. I got more lumps out of the nut coal than I did out of the lump, while the lump was full of nut coal the nut coal was not full of lumps, therefore what is the use to buy lump coal when the nut coal has more lumps in it than the lump has in it." About this time Seldon Ainsworth stepped up and John continued, "My dog found that last rabbit and after waiting until he was about 500 yards I pulled down on him when you ought to have seen him turn over about fourteen times. and say let me tell you, we flushed a flock of rabbits — — —"

Ike Wilson is an intelligent, hard-working, frugal lad. For years he has been under the training of our mayor, Hon. John W. Blue. In addition to hard work and thrift, Mr. Blue has instilled into his mind honesty of purpose and a veneration for all things of a religious nature. Mr. Blue has found out however that there is a superstition in the race that cannot be eradicated. Sometime last fall two boys from Boxville went hunting walnuts. They went beyond Bob Kemps to the woods and returned late in the evening. All the walnuts they had was in one sack and on arriving at the graveyard at the distillery the little fellow who carried the sack decided he was doing all the work and said so. It was then agreed that they would strip and divide the nuts. For good luck they laid a walnut on top of each gate post and entering the old deserted graveyard soon found a smooth place behind a broad tombstone where they poured their walnuts and began to divide them. They divided one at a time in a conversation something like this: "You take this one and I'll take that one. You take this one and I'll take that one." About that time Ike Wilson stopped at the graveyard gate. He could hear the conversation but could not see the boys. He decided immediately that the Lord and the bad man were in there dividing up the occupants of the graves. His hair rose straight. His legs moved by powerful electric motors. He simply flew until caught by a colored man who inquired, "What you running so for?" His explanations were no good. The colored man dragged Ike back to the graveyard gate. They listened and here is what they heard: "You take this one and I'll take that. You take this one and I'll take that. And now that is all except those two at the gate." Ike stopped running when he got under the bed at home. The other colored man was still going when last heard of.
